

DANIEL ROBERTSON AUSTRALIA PTY LTD

RUSTIC CHARM

PREMIUM BRICKS AND PAVERS

For over 155 years the Daniel Robertson family have been supplying the building industry with premium products from roofing slate in the 1850s to the uniquely coloured and textured clay bricks and paving products available today.

Daniel Robertson's rough textured Rustic Paving range reveals all the natural hues of fired clay. Crafted from local clays, they are fired for tonal appeal and hand-sorted into harmonious blends. These paving products suit pools, driveways and outdoor landscaping areas providing a safe, non-slip surface. Their textured face helps disguise food spills and tyre marks that are more obvious on smooth surfaces. The rustic nature and tonal variation of these tiles complement rendered houses, giving a subtle textured relief.

The Rustic range includes a thinner paving tile in two sizes, 230 x 75 x 25mm and a wider 230 x 150 x 25mm. At only 25mm thick, these tiles are ideal for laying on concrete. Pictured here are Daniel Robertson's Apricot Pavers measuring 230 x 150 x 25mm thick. The Rustic Pavers are thicker (50mm) and suitable for laying on crushed rock and compacted sand. Both the paver and tile are available in natural earthy blends of red, buff, apricot and tan.

Daniel Robertson is renowned for producing old-style bricks and pavers with an aged character sought by many architects and clients. Products continue to evolve as the team at Daniel Robertson work with customers, builders and architects to develop new colour blends, shapes and textures. ## BRICKS WITH AN AGED CHARACTER

PREMIUM BRICKS AND PAVERS

Many of Melbourne's finer homes have one thing in common which sets them apart – old-style bricks, pavers and tiles

In a leafy Melbourne street sits this elegantly designed Daniel Robertson brick home wrapped in a manicured garden and paved with Robertson's matching Rustic tiles.

Established in 1853, Daniel Robertson has been supplying the building industry for more than 155 years. Today their product range includes textured clay bricks, pavers and tiles.

The company's Roman brick range was developed when clients noticed that the bricks in ancient buildings in Europe and in old English estates were slimmer than the Australian brick. At only 50mm in height, the Roman brick is thinner than the Australian standard 75mm. This brick appears longer and enhances the horizontal dimensions of a building, anchoring a newly built home. Additionally, the use of this brick allows ceiling heights to be maximised when the building may otherwise look too upright with a standard brick.

Robertson's clay bricks, in both the Roman and standard ranges are fired for tonal variation and have a textured rustic face. Before delivery, the bricks are hand sorted into packs to ensure the correct balance of tones appears in the finished wall. Hand sorting enables Daniel Robertson to custom blend bricks to clients' requests.

The brick blend selected for this home is Hawthorn Black, a blend of rusty tans, warm earthy browns and the occasional sooty black brick.

Fired from the same clays as the bricks, Daniel Robertson's product range includes Rustic paving tiles featured here on the driveway, rear courtyard and entry path. These tiles are available in all the brick colour blends – buffs, reds, apricots and tans. There are varying widths and thicknesses which can be laid in many attractive patterns.

Daniel Robertson is renowned for producing old-style bricks with an aged character sought by discerning clients. Many of Melbourne's finest homes have been built with Daniel Robertson's bricks.
